

Development log

Creating this HTML project on conscious consumption has been a valuable learning experience in multiple ways. Through this process, we have gained insights into both the technical and content aspects of web development. We learned how to effectively organize content using HTML tags. By structuring the information into sections and lists, we were able to create a clear and navigable layout. Also we applied our CSS knowledge to enhance the visual appeal of the website. Learning how to style elements, such as lists and headings, has deepened my understanding of how design choices impact user experience. We also were aware of the basic design principles and the role of spacing, colors, and font choices in making content engaging and accessible.